

KMT Waterjet

Responsive Development for an International Site

The Challenge

The client, KMT Waterjet, an industrial products manufacturer, needed a new responsive website that would showcase their international presence online with the same features as their old site, but with additional functionality. The client provided a new responsive design that they wanted built in the Auctori content management system as well to showcase their products based upon the visitor's country location.

The Solution

Unidev created a new responsive site for KMT Waterjet built in Auctori. The new site provides users with an optimal user experience while allowing them to access the site from any device with a web browser and an internet connection. Unidev's developers added additional code to the master pages to detect which product pages should be seen based on the user's location, the U.S. or Germany.

Biggest Win

The product pages on the new mobile-friendly site showcase OEM (Original Equipment Manufacturers) products based on user location.
